It depends on the type of gambling, and how it is done.

In Arizona, gambling is nothing new.

Pari-mutuel betting on racehorses and dogs has been a staple of Arizona life since before World War II.

Then in the late 1980s, the U.

S.

Congress authorized Native American tribes to operate gaming facilities on reservation lands, and Arizona joined other states in the Tribal casino boom of the 1990s.

Visitors and locals can also participate in the Arizona lottery system that includes scratch-off tickets and participation in the two biggest multi-state drawings, Mega Millions and Powerball.

There are more than two-dozen land-based casinos in operation that range in size from slots parlors and local poker rooms to full Las Vegas-style gaming resorts with slots, blackjack and other table games.
