Amazon sellers are buying fake reviews for just R 1,200 each: Report

One review firm, AMZTigers of Germany boasts of deploying 3,000 testers in the UK alone.

Despite a crackdown by Amazon, sellers on the platform are continuing to purchase fake reviews for around 15 euro each (about £1,200), according to a Daily Mail investigation.

The companies selling fake reviews to sellers rely on an army of "testers" who buy the products to post the four and five-star reviews online, said the report on Sunday. The testers get the refund for the cost of purchasing the products, in addition to a small fee. The testers buy the products so that the reviews they post get classified as "Amazon Verified Purchases".
