Tristan says one man handed over his £20,000 inheritance, while others have run up huge debts. And the kickboxing brothers raised on a council estate sit it back and watch the money roll in.

Lawyer Paul Hampson, owner of CEL Solicitors in Liverpool, said UK laws haven't kept up with technology, which allows constant communication and instant access to online banking.

Andrew added: "Four dollars a minute to keep her company was a good deal, however she made her real money because men fell in love with her and believed her fake story and tipped thousands to keep her attention and stop other men seeing her."

"We had his phone number. I was only a year into the industry. I called the guy. I said, "Hello, my name is Tristan Tate, I know you used myfreecams.com. Let me tell you Chloe works at a studio I own. Financially she's fine, keep your £20,000." I gave him this advice.

"He thanked me. He deleted his username from the site." But weeks later the man visited another site and Tristan told staff to "take him for everything he's got".

Tristan said he "runs a legitimate business and if they abuse it it's their problem".

He added: "The addiction in terms of a beautiful woman you think might be in love with you, the addiction is very real. I've seen it crush them.

The women can earn a fortune too. One, a Londoner named Jessica, 29, used to work for the brothers and said several men paid "thousands" to cover the cost of a boob job.

I did it all through poker.

However, there are thousands of sportsbooks worldwide and in fact, only a small number are truly influential in setting lines and moving markets and those books hardly take public money compared to money bet by professionals and syndicates

However, just like every other wager, the answer to whether you should partake in a boost or not comes down to math.

Use this example from Miller to help you determine if a boost is a good option or not.

I sometimes fall into slumps where perhaps I take betting "too serious. This is just a snippet of what "The Logic of Sports Betting" has to offer.
