Whether you bet on sports, scratch cards, roulette, poker, or slots-in a casino, at the track, or online-a gambling problem can strain your relationships, interfere with work, and lead to financial disaster.

You might gamble in secret or lie about how much you gamble, feeling others won't understand or that you will surprise them with a big win.

Once you start gambling, can you walk away? Or are you compelled to gamble until you've spent your last dollar, upping your bets in a bid to win lost money back?

Many older gamblers are reluctant to reach out to their adult children if they've gambled away their inheritance, but it's never too late to make changes for the better.

If you're gambling on your smartphone, find other ways to fill the quiet moments during your day.

Maintaining recovery from gambling addiction depends a lot on finding alternative behaviors you can substitute for gambling.

Dealing with gambling cravings

Think about how you'll feel after all your money is gone and you've disappointed yourself and your family again.
