You'll likely receive one or more W-2G forms if you:

For starters, you can't deduct more than the amount you took home in gaming revenue.

However, many people do not itemize, instead choosing to take the standard deduction, which knocks a set amount off your taxable income without you having to do anything.

If your gambling losses, combined with all your other deductions, don't reach at least this number, you might not want to write off those bad bets.

Do you need any other documents?

I dug into my database to study some of the recent trends that have formed in the Thursday, Sunday, and Monday night games.

- The SNF study only includes Sunday night games, not other games covered by the NBC crew.

If you consider the general TNF, SNF and MNF data above, it makes some foundational sense that the biggest home-field advantage would come on Sunday night.

Also, the trend of Unders on all three nights is eye-opening.
