The anti-gambling stigma that existed for decades faded quickly in American popular culture, opening the door for a massive, multibillion-dollar legal sports betting industry to emerge.

A moneyline bet requires you to just pick the winner of the game, and uses American odds to calculate the payout.

Moneylines are available for all sports, but they are predominantly used when betting on lower-scoring sports like baseball, hockey and soccer.

How to Place a Bet

Props

But it's more likely than not he goes under, according to FanDuel's lines, so you have to pay a steeper price to bet the under than the over.

Even if you're not creating your own statistical models, tracking specific props and understanding how they're priced can help give you an edge over the sportsbooks.

Identify Your Strengths and Weaknesses

What is the spread in sports betting?

Bookmakers set a spread with the hopes of getting equal action on both sides of a game.

For example, the Colts are a -3 point favorite against the Texans.

The spread at -3 suggests the teams are fairly equal and maybe in this case, the Colts are only -3 because they are playing at home.

Bookmakers see these teams as equal and expect to receive fairly even money from bettors.

If these teams were widely considered equal and bookmakers put the spread at -10, they wouldn't get equal money as Texans +10 would likely be pounded by bettors.

In a spread bet, the odds are usually set at -110 on both sides, depending on the sportsbook and state.
