To give you an idea of just how big Alibaba is, they reported over $85 billion in sales during the 11/11 Singles' Day event period in 2021.

Many electronics (like this 4WD Arduino robot we built) have fantastic prices on AliExpress, because they're made in China and you can buy them directly from the manufacturer. That means you avoid the retail mark-up added by a middle-man.

AliExpress offers some excellent deals, but not all products are legit, and things are rarely as cheap as they initially seem. You can get all sorts of counterfeit items there, from electronics to clothing.

Unfortunately, this also depends upon the shipping method used. In 2018, Alibaba launched its own shipping service called Cainiao, with their own warehouses and shipping partners in major countries. Cainiao Global Economy, I have found, is terrible.

Packages over $150-$135 value will not have VAT added automatically; this will be handled by the shipping company instead, and you'll also be liable for the additional handling charge, as well as possibly import duty.

What About AliExpress's Quality of Goods?

If you're willing to risk it anyway, be sure to test the drive with a tool like h2TestW as soon as you receive it.

If a package just doesn't arrive, or you have some other issue, open a dispute with the seller. You start the process by using the "helpful" Evac customer service bot, located in the bottom right after you've logged into your orders overview page. Click the relevant problem from the choices given, and wait as the bot loads your orders.
